Path and Pinterest logos are very similar.5. How does it look black and white? When I start designing a logo, I always start in black and white. Although honestly, I don't think there was much in terms of corporate sponsorship planned in 1924. At a time when companies should demonstrate social responsibility, sponsoring the Olympic Games in China - a country with questionable human rights and environmental practices - Olympic sponsors can and should prepare for a counter-up of some kind. Even a better question is who would have thought that sponsoring an organization like the Olympics could lead to negative stigma and public opinion? Behind every big logo there is a story. Designers should understand color psychology and the effect that typographical character has on designing a large logo. However, other sponsors such as Samsung, Coca-Cola, Visa, McDonalds and GE are global and multinational companies that generally do not walk in alliances or partnerships without a clear plan of action. These companies are trying to expand their brand to 1+ billion potential Chinese consumers. Perhaps the Olympic Committee should expand the Charter to ask countries to impose a moratorium on corporate countertop during the Olympics; if both sponsors and protest groups agree that it is difficult to ignore such a great phase.
